The typewriting machine, that great saver of time and labour to a business man, is still looked upon more as a curio than anything else and is only to be found in use in one or two offices. The machine, it is true, cannot attain its greatest utility unless a stenographer is employed to take down from dictation what is required to be written, and stenographers are not readily engageable here. Where simple copies are required, however, the machine would be as usoful here as elsewhere and Chinese clerks could readily be taught to manipulate it. If the phonograph were in use the necessity for a stenographer would of course be dispensed with, and all a merchant would have to do would be to read bis letters into the phonograph and let his Chinese clerk transfer them to paper as they

at a convenient pace. The various processes of press copying and multiplying can be applied as readily to documents from the type writing machine, as to those written by hand. Every year that passes will see machinery more extensively supplanting hand labour in writing as in other occupations. At present we must confess to a little scepticism as to the perfection for practical use to which the phonograph is said to have arrived, but that it will before very long be in general use for business purposes we think there can be no doubt. Whether all these appliances for making correspondence easy are an unmixed benefit may be t matter of some little question. When a man is provided with a stenographer and a typewriting mechine his letters are apt to run to three or four times the length they did be-

ANOTHER GOLD FIELD IN PAHANO

The Singapore. Free Press contains an ac-Palang, written by one of the members of the Swiftand Cowper, Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, party. This was the sole sign of human ife since we had left Sungei Bra. On the morrow (25th, Christmas Day) we reached the place where Chedola had said gold used to be worked, and was still ready to be worked. It was three o'clock when we reached the Ganong Pasch alluvial workings. A bread tract of some eight or ten square miles lies the foot of the mountain, right under the les the principal range in this part of the Peninsula. There were holes there, not in hundreds, but in thousands, some of them of considerable depth; and the field bore evidence of hundreds of workmen having been employed but when, nobody knows. Not a trace of a house or building of any kind could we see. The place was not only absolutely deserted now, but all traces of previous dwellers had gone the natives have but the bare tradition besides the place itself, so that it must be put down to what might therefore be termed pre-historic times. That evening we erected an elephant house, cutting a large tree about 25 feet from the ground, and on the stump building our room.

The 26th saw the Mining Engineer at work, fessicking among the holes. He was satisfied. Two of us, meantime, went up the Gunong, which we took to be about 4.000 feet high. It was about as steep as we could conveniently climb, but covered with gigantic trees to the very top. In places protty streams trickled down between lings boulders. Some of the latter we blusted with dynamite.

The evening saw the samples treated, and it was proved without doubt that the immenso heaps of rock dug up and laft in mounds about the place contained, well, a fair amount of gold. A peculiar kind of "coment" covering the lode 6,273.96 gave a very high average. This was enough; 4977.24 we determined to leave the miner to explore further. He went down the range, crossed into the Negri Sembilan, and so left the field. We returned with all haste to Kwala Lui-the stiffest journey we had done for many a day-15 miles through wet jungle. And then the

But we did not reach Kwals Pahang till the New year was in, and the spectaclo of a couple of wet and wearied travellors on a steam leunch, drinking prosperity to the New Year in a cop of Van Houten's Cocoa was a sight to be remembered. The Mining Engineer reports that in his journey down the range, he discovered two reefs, about the value of which there can be no doubt. They are probably the matrix whenes came the alluvial of the Sungs Lui field ... the maps, plans, and Engineer's Report have be sent home, it will not be long before action taken and another district worked, with, it is believed, more success than has attended some of

But is it may to at all? How about the contents of the latter Are they so much better than they used to be. or even as good? It would be natural to expect that, with the immense advance in knowledge and the much more stirring lives that people lead, the letters of the present day should be much more interesting than the letters of fifty Liung Tsz was charged with snatching a rifle | years ago. But every one will admit that, for from Dollah Bux, P.C. 532, the property of the some reason or other, our grandfathers and grandmothers wrote far more entertaining Complainant stated that he was on duty in letters than we do. When it cost 9d. to assaulting his house boy. Chan Hing, on the send a letter from London to Birmingham, and is, 4d. to send a letter to Dublin, there was at letters of the auto-reform days! And not only the average men and women of the time. We all know the appearance of those generous-lookng quarto sheets they always used, and tho of the third page. We can see the effect of a high postage-rate to some extent still. Though t only costs five pence to send a letter to India less than a third of the old postage to Dublin), who would think of scribbling off a hurried note to Lahore or Calcutta ? Anything less than a good budget would be thought a waste of money. But a better guarantee still for a good letter was that the postage was almost always paid by he receiver. What paios must have been taken so that the receiver should not gradge the money! No scrappy notes were permissible then ; no transparent excuses for brevity; no endings "in great haste." Plenty of time was allowed-plenty of room, pleaty of thought; and if the daily letterbag was not so heavy as it is now, what it brought. was always acknowledged to be worth paying for. Oneor two of the so-called letters which are common enough to-day would inevitably have led to a cold (or perhaps a warm) request that the correspondence should cease.
